The Adventure:
In The Jungle Book, Shere Khan the tiger was the most feared animal in the whole jungle. But do you remember that he had a limp? Of course, this didn’t keep him from being a successful hunter. Lots of people have different disabilities to overcome as well. Their obstacles don’t prevent them from pursuing adventures, however.

As a Lair, organize a mini Olympics. Think of three sports or games that are played by athletes with disabilities, then compete in the same way against other Cubs in your Pack.

Online Resources:
- Canadian Paralympic Committee
- Wheelchair Basketball Canada
- Rick Mercer at Variety Village
- Rick Mercer and Paralympic Snowboarding

Safety note:
When your Lair decides on the events for the Olympics, think of what equipment (helmets, crash pads, etc.) may be needed to prevent an injury if somebody takes a spill.

Plan:
- What sports or games do Cubs in your Lair enjoy and how are they adapted for people with disabilities?
- When will you hold the mini-Olympics?
- What games or sports will you include?
- What equipment will you need?
- What skills do you need to learn ahead of time?

Do:
- Learn any new skills at meetings.
- Practise like an athlete. Hold the Shere Khan Olympics.
- Have fun!

Review:
- What do you know now that you did not know before?
- What surprised you in this Adventure?
- How did your Lair handle this Adventure?
- How has this changed how you see people with different abilities?
- What were some of the highlights of this Adventure?
- How did you feel before, during, and after this adventure?
- What would you do differently in the future?
- How can you build on this experience? Can you invite a Special Olympian to talk to your Pack?

Safety note:
When your Lair decides on the events for the Olympics, think of what equipment (helmets, crash pads, etc.) may be needed to prevent an injury if somebody takes a spill.