

Plan:

- What problem or shortcoming can you bring to your Crew for discussion?
- What potential solutions do you have in mind?
- What is your budget and timetable for this adventure?
- What partners might your Crew have on its project?

Do:

- Put your Crew's planning to work to address an issue facing your community.

Review:

- What do you know now that you did not know before?
- Was your Crew successful in achieving its goal?
- What problems did you encounter, and how did you overcome them?
- How did your Crew work as a team to achieve or pursue its goal?
- What would you do differently in the future?

Safety note:

- Remember that Scouts Canada is a non-partisan organization. Your Crew's active service to the community should reflect this. Your Crew's projects should be inclusive of all members.

Online Resources:

- Winnipeg teams in mass North End cleanup backed by police chief
- Don Valley Parkway rainbow gets a makeover
- Park Avenue Community Oven lands \$25K in funding

It starts with Scouts

What's Your Beef?

Citizenship

The Adventure:

One of the benefits of being part of a Rover Crew is the potential in your numbers. While many outdoor adventures can be independently pursued, there's also something special about sharing an activity with others. Some activities shouldn't even be considered without the support of others – activities like scuba diving or rock climbing.

Being part of a Rover Crew also opens up opportunities for community service. Is there a problem or a shortcoming facing your community that's bothering you? If so, share your thoughts with your Crew. Together, come up with a course of action and get involved!

Canadianpath.ca

It starts with Scouts

Plan:

- What problem or shortcoming can you bring to your Crew for discussion?
- What potential solutions do you have in mind?
- What is your budget and timetable for this adventure?
- What partners might your Crew have on its project?

Do:

- Put your Crew's planning to work to address an issue facing your community.

Review:

- What do you know now that you did not know before?
- Was your Crew successful in achieving its goal?
- What problems did you encounter, and how did you overcome them?
- How did your Crew work as a team to achieve or pursue its goal?
- What would you do differently in the future?

Safety note:

- Remember that Scouts Canada is a non-partisan organization. Your Crew's active service to the community should reflect this. Your Crew's projects should be inclusive of all members.

Online Resources:

- Winnipeg teams in mass North End cleanup backed by police chief
- Don Valley Parkway rainbow gets a makeover
- Park Avenue Community Oven lands \$25K in funding

It starts with Scouts

What's Your Beef?

Citizenship

The Adventure:

One of the benefits of being part of a Rover Crew is the potential in your numbers. While many outdoor adventures can be independently pursued, there's also something special about sharing an activity with others. Some activities shouldn't even be considered without the support of others – activities like scuba diving or rock climbing.

Being part of a Rover Crew also opens up opportunities for community service. Is there a problem or a shortcoming facing your community that's bothering you? If so, share your thoughts with your Crew. Together, come up with a course of action and get involved!

Canadianpath.ca

It starts with Scouts