The Adventure:

Have you ever wondered what it’s like to sit in front of a microphone and share your thoughts and personality with the world? It wasn’t very long ago that broadcasting over the air was the only way to be in radio. This meant you needed some expensive technical equipment and the legal right to broadcast—both pretty big obstacles!

Today, the internet has made it easy to reach out to the world in all kinds of ways. Online broadcasting is more popular than ever, and it’s a fun way for your Patrol to connect with other Scout Troops. Whether live-streaming or recording carefully edited podcasts, you can give sitting behind a microphone a try!

Online Resources:
Scouting Radio

Safety Note:
When taking part in online adventures, always be careful to protect your privacy and the privacy of others in your Patrol. Do not share full names or other personal information, and do not post pictures online without an individual’s permission.

Plan:
- When and where will you share this adventure?
- How can you learn about radio broadcasting?
- Who can mentor your Patrol?
- What equipment do you need?
- What will the theme of your radio show be?
- How will you organize the time for your show? Will you have a script?

Do:
- Learn about and practise your broadcasting skills, both behind the microphone and in front of a computer.
- Broadcast to the world!

Review:
- What do you know now that you did not know before?
- How did it feel to broadcast or record?
- How did talking into a microphone affect how you spoke?
- What feedback did you receive on your radio show, and how did it make you feel?
- What would you do differently next time?

Do:
- Learn about and practise your broadcasting skills, both behind the microphone and in front of a computer.
- Broadcast to the world!

Review:
- What do you know now that you did not know before?
- How did it feel to broadcast or record?
- How did talking into a microphone affect how you spoke?
- What feedback did you receive on your radio show, and how did it make you feel?
- What would you do differently next time?