The Adventure:
There is usually more than one way to sort things out when you find yourself in a conflict with somebody else. It can often be helpful to think of the different ways that you can make peace—especially if the other person does not agree to your first idea.

Make a conflict cube with six different ways that you can solve problems. A conflict cube is a square box with six different ways to make peace written on it—one on each side.

Write down made-up conflicts, then act out making peace based on one of the approaches from your conflict cube. You can choose your approach by rolling your conflict cube like a die.

Plan:
- What materials will you need for this adventure? Will you include pictures on your conflict cube?
- How do you make a box?
- Where will you share this adventure?
- Will you work alone, or in Lairs?
- How much time will you take for this adventure?
- What different ways are there of making peace?

Do:
- Talk about different ways of solving problems. Choose six to include on your conflict cube.
- Make your conflict cube.
- Brainstorm conflicts. Write down your scenarios and put them in a hat.
- Act out your conflicts. Roll your conflict cube and show the other Cubs how to make peace based on the way you rolled.

Review:
- What do you know now that you did not know before?
- What is your favourite way of making peace? Why?
- Why are different ways of solving problems sometimes needed?
- How can you remember these ideas when you do not have your conflict cube with you?

Safety Note:
What ways of making peace are safe in every situation? What ways of making peace are sometimes okay, but might not be other times?

Online Resources:
Sesame Street: Robin Williams: Conflict (youtube.com/watch?v=bG1Te-OUnavQ)